ABOUT SHRDC International Training Programs

Sharing Seoul's exemplary practices and urban policies worldwide

The Seoul Human Resource Development Center (SHRDC) was established in 1962 as the educational training organization for Seoul city officials directly under the Seoul Metropolitan Government (SMG).

Since 2008, SHRDC has been providing training for foreign city officials, aiming to share Seoul's best practices and urban policies globally. Over the past 15 years, we have disseminated Seoul's urban solutions through 184 training programs, benefiting 2,922 participants from 304 foreign cities in 75 countries, both online and offline.

Notably, numerous participants in the international training have expressed positive feedback, stating that they gained valuable insights from Seoul's experiences. These lessons have proven instrumental in addressing urban challenges in their respective cities and local governments enhancing the capabilities of public officials.

METROPOLIS International Training Institute Headquarters

A Decade of Learning & Sharing of Urban Solutions for Metropolis

In 2008, SHRDC initiated an international training program for foreign city officials alongside the establishment of the Asian Center of the Metropolis International Institute (MII). Following the successful operation of the Asian center, SHRDC inaugurated the headquarters of the Metropolis International Training Institute (MITI) in 2014. Since the inception of the MITI headquarters, the center has been dedicated to enhancing the capacity of public officials in major metropolises globally. It achieves this by disseminating Seoul's urban policies and serving as a platform for innovative ideas. At the 14th Metropolis Congress held in Brussels last year, with the generous support of Secretary-General Jordi Vaquer, SHRDC shared Seoul's efforts and the legacy of MITI with all members.

In 2024, marking the 10th anniversary of the MITI headquarters, SHRDC plans to completely revamp our MITI training program. This involves adopting a cross-sectoral and multilateral approach to ensure its effectiveness. Most importantly, in 2024 and beyond, with the renewed MITI training programs, SHRDC aims to transform the rigid and perfunctory MITI network into a true embodiment of the idea of "a global network of local training institutes," as outlined in the 2024 -2026 Metropolis Strategic Action Plan.

NEW DIRECTION of 2024 SHRDC Int'l Training Programs

Hybrid Online Training with Cross-Sectoral Approach

The exacerbated inequalities and polarization observed during the COVID-19 pandemic and the recent climate crisis have emerged as global urban challenges. To effectively address urban issues characterized by escalating volatility, uncertainty, complexity, and ambiguity, a comprehensive and innovative approach is imperative. There is an increasing demand for an integrated approach to climate policy, transportation, and housing. However, due to the operation of fragmented training programs in each field, the sharing of substantial urban problem-solving experiences and policies has been inadequate.

In response to this, SHRDC has developed an educational curriculum that focuses on policies aimed at resolving global urban issues of polarization and inequality, rather than providing fragmented training in specific thematic areas such as transportation and climate/environment. To this end, SHRDC has devised a comprehensive training program with a cross-sectoral approach under the theme of SMG's "Going Together with the Socially Neglected" policy, which has received positive evaluations from training participants.

In 2024, SHRDC plans to extend invitations to a select group of high-performing online training participants for offline (in-person) training programs in Seoul. These programs are scheduled to take place in the latter half of the year, coinciding with the annual forum.

Self-Paced Learning & DEEP-DIVE LEARNING PLAN

What is Self-Paced Learning ?

Self-paced learning is a method that allows learners to manage both the content and timeframe of their study. In the SHRDC online training program, participants have control over when and where they learn, accessing 3 or 4 pre-recorded lectures through the online platform.

What is Deep-Dive Learning Plan ?

The SHRDC online training follows a self-paced e-learning model with mandatory pre-recorded online lectures and a quiz by a set deadline. Upon completion, participants submit a "Deep-Dive Learning Plan," functioning as a training result report.

In a Deep-Dive Learning plan, participants outline ideas and policy tools to enhance their online training. This plan is crucial for inviting high-performing participants to offline(in-person) training programs in Seoul in the latter half of 2024, coinciding with the annual forum. Essentially, the submitted plan serves as the primary criterion for selecting participants for the offline programs. SHRDC collaborates with each institution and city as a knowledge partner to select participants for the offline program based on the Deep-Dive Learning Plan.

* GTSN: Going Together with the Socially Neglected * Subject to change due to the condition of the SHRDC

To realize the "global network of local training institutes" concept in the 2024-2026 Metropolis Strategic Action Plan, SHRDC is collaborating with multilateral knowledge partners. Unlike previous international training programs, the 2024 program's content involves input from various SHRDC knowledge partners, including Citynet, ICLEI, and UCLG, alongside Seoul Metropolitan Government's affiliated education and research institutions.

Furthermore, experts from Metropolis member cities will contribute to program design and delivery, broadening learning opportunities for public officials from more foreign cities and local governments. However, for effective learning and content alignment, the identification of the target audience and key knowledge partners may be at SHRDC's discretion.
